

The present global crisis of capitalism : diagnosis, new stakes for new kind of proposals, opportunities and potentials

Frédéric BOCCARA

1. The financial crisis is linked to the deep over-accumulation of capital. The acceleration of debt and of apparent labour productivity have worked together against the real potential of growth and employment, because of their domination by the basic rules of capitalism. 2. We need new answers, up to the human challenges and to the present capitalism. Particularly with what our marxist school identifies as major contradictions brought by “informational revolution”. 3. Limiting the capitalist logic is an answer now to be overcome. An alternative logic is at stakes to begin to overcome in practice the 4 markets: labour market, production market, monetary and financial market, international and world market. 4. For Europe, we formulate immediate proposals concerning ECB and banking. They help rapprochement between critical and heterodox streams of economists. 5. We outline three major stakes for further research and proposals: world common currency, multinational firms, public services for social demand (expansion, with social and ecological content) and for efficiency, with a new kind of productivity, towards common goods of humanity.
